WOMbat, the UK's leading ethically-sourced adventure clothing retailer, has announced it's giving hundreds of pounds worth of clothes away for free.

The Cheshire-based company sells a wide range of tough outdoor clothing from hoodies to wellies and critically, cares how its clothes are made and the effect they have on the environment. In a bid to find other people who share the same ideals, WOMbat is asking like minded adventure lovers to make themselves known.

The team at WOMbat know full well they would rather be climbing a mountain or paddling a river than filling in a form. So, in order to tempt adventurous types to give up a few minutes of their outdoor time and fill in their details on the website, they're giving away £250 worth of vouchers.

Everyone who signs up at WOMbat's website between now and May 31 will be entered into the prize draw and have the chance to get their hands on hundreds of pounds worth of adventure clothing, absolutely free.

WOMbat's Victoria Tingey said: "Our business is based on providing tough, well-made adventure clothing to people who love the outdoors and want to look good whether they're hanging off a rock or jumping out of a plane.

"To make sure no one in the supply chain has poor working conditions or is exploited, we only stock ethical clothing from trusted suppliers and manufacturers. We also make sure our clothing doesn't hurt the environment, which is why over half our stock is either fair trade clothing or made from organic materials.

"We're hoping this giveaway will tempt like minded people to spend a few minutes visiting our website to find out what we're all about."

The good news doesn't stop there though. Every person who registers their details on WOMbat's website will be added to a news list, giving them access to the very latest updates about what's happening at WOMbat, as well as details on exclusive online offers and discounts.
